Oklahoma State (7-6-0) - O. State is a living testimony to mediocrity and commercialism. Bowl games in college have become so much about capitalism and business enterprise that they have lost the luster of athletic competition. The Cowboys actually went to a Bowl Game with a 6-6 record to play against another team with a 6-6 record. During the regular season, OSU finished 5th out of 6 teams in their division. Yes... merely their division, not their conference. The only reason they even played in the Independence Bowl (financial incentives aside), is that the "Ben Gay / Preparation H" Bowl didn't call them first. Perhaps the only savings grace is the Oklahoma State does have an exciting offense... averaging over 400 yards and 35 points per game. When you add that to their virtually non-existent defense, you know you are in for some exciting, high-scoring football by both teams. They may be mediocre but they are certainly fun to watch.
